"Folks, step right up and see the most amazing sight to ever come this way..." And step up they did. From small town to big cities, organizers wanted to showcase the best their communities had to offer. But local fairs grew far beyond their humble beginnings as agricultural exhibits. Audiences thrilled to see daring competitors and performers, laughed at comedians and clowns, and were left in awe of new technological marvels like flight. Locals flocked to midways and circuses, and left with bright memories.
