The fictitious hero of this 1984 installation is a lonely dreamer who develops an impossible project: to fly alone in cosmic space. But this dream is also an individual appropriation of a collective Soviet project and the official Soviet propaganda connected to it. Having built a makeshift slingshot, the hero apparently flies through the ceiling of his shabby room and vanishes into space. The miserable room and the primitive slingshot suggest the reality behind the Soviet utopia, in which where cosmic vision and the political project of the Communist revolution are seen as indissoluble. The Man who Flew into Space from His Apartment also raises questions of authorship in modernity. All of Kabakov's work is made in the name of other, fictitious artists. This reveals a hidden rule of the modern art system: only an artist who doesn't want to be an artist or who doesn't even know that he is an artist is a real artist--just as only an artwork that does not look like an artwork is a real artwork. The installation is a narrative, the documentation of a fictitious event. Afterall Books are distributed by The MIT Press.

Shawn Hoffman:

As a pupil exactly feel bored to help reading. If their teacher questioned them to go to the library as well as to make summary for some book, they are complained. Just tiny students that has reading's soul or real their leisure activity. They just do what the instructor want, like asked to go to the library. They go to generally there but nothing reading critically. Any students feel that reading is not important, boring along with can't see colorful pictures on there. Yeah, it is for being complicated. Book is very important to suit your needs. As we know that on this age, many ways to get whatever we want. Likewise word says, many ways to reach Chinese's country. So , this Ilya Kabakov: The Man Who Flew into Space from his Apartment (AFTERALL)
